oner up, sad ceased to suffer. Sympathy cannot dry thetears of those who mourn their dead. Love cannot light again the lamp that flickered, faded into eternity-the past was bright and beautiful; the present-well, God's will be done. His was the gift. He gave, He bath claimed-He alone can g vo to bleeding hearts the power to say, Amen!

The attention of holders of solverit credits. notes, deeds of trust, etc., is especially di rected to that clause of the Revenue Act which requires the Assessor to make a compiete assessment of the same.

The law regulating assessments, requires the Assessor to call at the residence of the tax-payer and obtain his lists, but us the people of the country, at the season of the year in which the assessment is required to made, are in their fields, often miles away and rarely at their homes during the day. i s much more convenient to all parties, and will greatly fabilitate the assessment for them to meet me at the appein ments designist above. The law do s n t require the assessor to ride over a mr u s alantation, nor a it the desire of the people to subject him.
